IF ISLAMABAD - Pakistan reported its first death from the coronavirus, a day after it had identified a woman who had tested positive for the virus while the number of new infections rose to 14. But cases in Pakistan continued to increase on Sunday, with at least seven new infections reported and some cases increasing at a rapid pace. Television reports on Sunday showed that a group of Muslims had visited a graveyard in the capital, Islamabad, to offer prayers during the holy month of Ramadan. READ MORE: Pakistan mulls quarantine, quarantine-like measures for coronavirus Pakistan has been under a state of emergency since March 18, when Prime Minister Imran Khan declared the virus a "national disaster" and banned all domestic flights, and non-residents were told to leave. But the country's only confirmed case of the virus continues to elude authorities. All public gatherings have been banned and individuals with suspicious symptoms have been quarantined. On Sunday, Khan said that the government was planning more stringent measures. "We want to impose a quarantine-like situation on our people. The hospitals are not meant to be centres of rehabilitation. They should be centres of treatment only," he said. "If the virus continues to spread, I am sure most of you won't be able to come to any event and I won't be able to go outside," he said. "It's a national crisis. Our number of cases is very high. If things continue to deteriorate further
